The first Friday in June is the time to grab some doughnuts. It's National Doughnut Day in the US, and many shops typically celebrate it by giving out free doughnuts and coffee. The day was created in 1938 to honor a special group of ladies. During World War I, an organization called the Salvation Army sent volunteers to France to help American soldiers. They made coffee and served snacks among other things. They often didn't have enough ingredients or equipment to prepare the snacks. Some of them came up with a solution, though. They made doughnuts by frying dough in soldiers' helmets. The treats were popular, and the volunteers became known as the Doughnut Girls. (延伸自 9 Unit 3)
