W: I know. I was surprised to learn that it's in many painkillers.
M: I've heard that it's in dark chocolate as well.
W: I drink a soda every afternoon to get caffeine.
M: That probably isn't the healthiest choice. It has lots of sugar.

M: I think the best way to get caffeine is by drinking coffee.
Q: What caffeine product does the woman frequently use? (Nov. Unit 2)
- D 2. M: I'm going to a café to get some work done.
W: Are you going there to finish writing that essay?
M: I did that last week. I also finished reading that novel you suggested.
W: That's great. You know, I often go to cafés to sketch.
M: I do that as well, but today I'm meeting a colleague to discuss a project.
W: Oh, I see. What time do you think you will be finished?
M: It will only take an hour.
Q: What will the man do at the café? (Nov. Unit 5)

- W: You've been looking for a job, right? What do you think about being a postmaster? You'd get to live somewhere cool: Port Lockroy, Antarctica!
- M: Cool? Antarctica is more than cool—it's freezing! But... OK, let me see the information. Wow, the pay isn't bad!
- W: Yeah, and it would only be from November to March.
- M: Huh, but the interviews will be held on May 19 and 20, and training isn't until October 15-21. I think I'll need to get another job until then!
- W: Maybe, but listen to all the things you'll be responsible for! You'll lead the morning meeting every day, and oversee or assist your team members with their responsibilities.
- M: OK, I have experience with that.
- W: You'll also maintain communications with the team back in the UK and you'll conduct a census of the local penguins!
- M: Ha, that's got to be super cute. It looks like the other main part of my responsibilities as postmaster will be controlling the stock of food and tools. I also have experience doing that!
- W: There is a warning at the bottom, though. Have a look. Getting to a hospital can take up to seven days...
- M: And medical supplies will be quite basic and limited. That's OK, though. I think I can handle it! I'm going to apply! (Oct. Unit 11)
