Good morning, everyone. Last class, we talked about ROVs. Today, we'll explore Autonomous Underwater Vehicles, or AUVs. AUVs are robots that move under the water all by themselves. They are smaller and cheaper than ROVs and can collect more data. Also, they don't need tethers that connect to ships. AUVs are great for mapping the ocean floor and studying water quality. They work well with other robots to gather lots of important information about the sea. AUVs can go on missions for a few hours or even several days. After their mission, AUVs come back to the surface. Then, scientists and engineers on ships can collect all the data the AUVs have recorded. (Apr. Unit 8)
